Looking to introduce technology to your classroom? This book is your roadmap to leading change in schools.

In today's rapidly changing world, it's more important than ever to prepare our students for the jobs of tomorrow. That means giving them the skills they need to succeed in a technology-driven economy.

But introducing technology into schools can be a challenge. There are often resistance to change from teachers, parents, and administrators. And even when there is support, it can be difficult to know where to start and how to make the most of technology in the classroom.

That's where The Edtech Advocate Guide To Leading Change In Schools comes in.

This book is your roadmap to leading change in schools. It will help you:

- Understand the challenges and opportunities of edtech
- Develop a vision for edtech in your school or district
- Build a team of edtech advocates
- Create a culture of innovation
- Measure the impact of edtech

The Edtech Advocate Guide To Leading Change In Schools is written by a team of experienced edtech leaders. They have helped schools and districts across the country successfully implement edtech initiatives. They know what works and what doesn't. And they're sharing their hard-earned wisdom in this book.

If you are an educator, administrator, or parent who wants to lead change in your school or district, this book is for you. It is your roadmap to success.
