But one day, inspired by a TV show, she decided to give it a try. She started slowly, running just a few minutes each day. But as the weeks turned into months, Stewart found herself getting faster and stronger. She started entering local races, and to her surprise, she started winning.

Soon, Stewart's story caught the attention of the media. She was featured in newspapers and magazines, and even appeared on national television.

People were fascinated by this ordinary woman who was achieving extraordinary things.

In 2019, Stewart set her sights on the world record for the fastest woman over 60. The record was held by a woman in Japan, who had run 100 meters in 13.47 seconds. Stewart knew it would be a tough challenge, but she was determined to give it her best shot.

For months, Stewart trained tirelessly. She ran every day, rain or shine. She worked on her speed, her endurance, and her technique. And on the day of the race, she was ready.

Stewart lined up at the starting line, her heart pounding in her chest. The gun sounded, and she took off. She ran as fast as she could, her legs pumping and her lungs burning. As she crossed the finish line, she looked up at the clock. She had done it. She had set a new world record.

Stewart's story is an inspiration to us all. It shows us that anything is possible, if we just set our minds to it. She is a reminder that we should never give up on our dreams, no matter how old we are or what obstacles we face.

The Speed Queen is a must-read for anyone who loves a good underdog story. It is a story of determination, perseverance, and triumph. It is a story that will stay with you long after you finish reading it.
